Synopsis: “Hiking through rural Scotland, Mark calls home from a telephone box, where he spots a handwritten ad for a cheap campervan at a nearby farm. He goes to the farm and strikes a deal for the campervan with the farmer; his cash plus a few days work.

The farmer and his shy daughter are the farm’s only inhabitants and after a few days, Mark suspects the farmer is abusing his daughter and decides to help her. In the farmhouse while the farmer listens to an old reel to reel recorder with headphones, Mark finds the girl and leads her outside. Suddenly, echoing throughout the farm – is a loud reverberating, looped recording of the call Mark made from the telephone box. Shocked and afraid, Mark and the girl climb into the campervan as the farmer appears and walks towards them. Mark starts the engine and tells her to lock her door, but she plunges a knife into him and the farmer hauls Mark's body away. Weeks later, a tourist examines the campervan, an identical handwritten advert in her hand..."
